Quality

Ensured by the use of the very best durum wheat and a pasta manufacturing process that follows traditional dough mixing and drying times, as well as the ongoing use of bronze drawing units, without ever interrupting technological research, to obtain an unchanging product strictly compliant with hygienic standards.

Tradition

Eighty years have passed since Rustichella d'Abruzzo first began making pasta. To strengthen the roots with its area of origin, the company now presents Primograno, a pasta that embodies all the traditional pasta-making memories of the Sergiacomo family. Primograno is the result of a project of interaction and synergy with the Vestina area, a part of Abruzzo that not everyone knows and which is located in the valley of the Tavo River, once dotted with mills and called by Mamilius "a milk and honey dispensing breast. There is no cereal, fruit or forage that does not grow there". Every year, a number of farmers from Pianella, Moscufo and Loreto Aprutino take part in the Primograno project.

A hundred hectares are set aside for sowing the S. Carlo, Varano and Mongibello varieties of durum wheat. The entire process, from sowing to harvesting, is monitored by company experts with the collaboration and control of the Foggia Cereal Growing Institute, in order to obtain a durum wheat with a high protein content, crucial for the quality of the Pasta.

Rustichella d'Abruzzo

Rustichella with its Primograno pasta, offers Pasta lovers that extra flavour, evoking the dimmed images of an age when, in the districts between the rivers Tavo and Nora, numerous mills once stood, ready to receive the golden ears of wheat from the Vestina area.

Rustichella Organic

Rustichella organic pasta is made from certified organic ingredients produced in the region of Abruzzo. The result of natural production methods is a semolina free from any trace of chemicals, which retains its organoleptic properties.

Rustichella apply to this organic semolina the same production standards which made their pasta famous. It is extruded through bronze dies then dried over 56 hours at a low temperature to give the pasta a rough surface and al dente texture.

The 'pure' semolina and artisan production of Rustichella Organic Pastas make them a unique top-quality product.

Risotto

Risotto is one of the most common ways of cooking rice in Italy. Rice cooked with broth and flavored with parmesan cheese and other ingredients, which can include meat, fish, or vegetables.

Its origins are in northern Italy, specifically Eastern Piedmont, Western Lombardy, and the Veneto, where rice paddies are abundant. Risottos are made using short-grain rice, with the stock being added gradually while the rice is stirred constantly. The cooking technique leads the rice to release its starch, giving the finished dish a creamy texture.

A high starch round medium or short grain rice is usually used to make risotto. Such rices have the ability to absorb liquids and to release starch and so they are stickier than the long grain varieties. The principal varieties used in Italy are Carnaroli and Vialone Nano and to a lesser degree Arborio. Carnaroli and Vialone Nano are considered to be the best (and most expensive) varieties, with different users preferring one over the other. They have slightly different properties: for example Carnaroli is less likely to get overcooked than Vialone Nano, but the latter being smaller cooks faster and absorbs condiments better.
